Introduction: Understanding Crisis and its Impact

A crisis is a situation that overwhelms an individual's coping mechanisms, creating a sense of intense emotional distress and a perceived inability to manage the situation effectively. Crises can manifest in various forms, from sudden traumatic events (e.g., accidents, natural disasters) to more gradual challenges (e.g., relationship breakdowns, financial difficulties, prolonged illness). The impact of a crisis is highly individual, varying based on personality, support systems, and past experiences. Understanding the nature of crisis is the first step towards effective intervention.
