1. Introduction: Understanding the Purpose and Structure of A Course in Miracles

A Course in Miracles (ACIM) is a self-study course designed to guide individuals toward spiritual enlightenment and lasting peace. It challenges the reader's perceptions of reality, suggesting that the world of suffering we experience is an illusion created by the ego. The course aims to replace ego-based thinking with love-based thinking, leading to a profound transformation of consciousness. This introduction will provide an overview of the course's three main components – the Text, the Workbook for Students, and the Manual for Teachers – and explain their interrelationship. It will also establish the book's approach of translating complex ACIM concepts into actionable steps for everyday life.

This chapter delves into the core ACIM concept of separation—the belief that we are separate from God and each other. It examines how this false belief fuels the ego's machinations, leading to fear, guilt, and suffering. We'll explore the ego's defense mechanisms: projection, denial, rationalization, and others. Practical exercises will guide readers in identifying the ego's voice in their own thoughts and feelings, paving the way for challenging and releasing these limiting beliefs.
