Hofmann stressed the fundamental building blocks of design: point, line, plane, and volume. He believed mastering these elements was crucial before venturing into more complex aspects. This chapter will explore:

Point: Understanding how a single point can create focus and visual weight. We'll analyze examples from Hofmann's posters, demonstrating how a strategically placed point can guide the viewer's eye.

Line: Exploring the expressive power of lines – their thickness, direction, and texture. Hofmann's use of lines in creating rhythm and structure will be examined.
