Book Concept: Artful Dodger: Huntington, NY

Logline: A seemingly idyllic Long Island town harbors a shocking secret: a sophisticated art thief who targets only the most valuable and historically significant pieces, leaving behind an intricate trail of clues for a determined detective to unravel.

Target Audience: Fans of mystery novels, historical fiction, and true crime; residents and visitors of Huntington, NY; individuals interested in art and its history.

Storyline/Structure:

The book blends elements of historical fiction and investigative journalism. It begins with the discovery of a missing heirloom from a prominent Huntington family – a rare 18th-century painting. Detective Isabella “Izzy” Diaz, a newcomer to the seemingly quaint town, is assigned the case. As she delves deeper, Izzy uncovers a pattern: other significant pieces of art have vanished over the years, all linked by subtle, almost artistic, clues left behind by the thief.

The narrative unfolds through alternating chapters:

Izzy’s investigation: Focuses on Izzy's detective work, her interactions with the town's eccentric residents, and the unveiling of the thief's elaborate methods.

Historical flashbacks: Provides context by exploring the history of Huntington, its prominent families, and the stolen artworks' significance. This will weave in real historical details about Huntington and the types of art that might have been prevalent there.

The thief's perspective: Offers glimpses into the mind of the thief, “The Artful Dodger,” revealing their motivations, skills, and the personal connection to Huntington's past that drives their actions.
