Sarah Walker, a young historian specializing in 18th-century American history, inherited a seemingly unremarkable terracotta medallion from a distant relative. The medallion, depicting a portrait of Benjamin Franklin, seemed like a typical piece of historical memorabilia, insignificant and likely of little value. However, Sarah's curiosity, spurred by a cryptic note accompanying the artifact, led her to embark on a journey that would challenge her assumptions and lead her down a rabbit hole of historical intrigue and hidden treasures. The note hinted at a hidden meaning within the medallion, prompting Sarah to delve into the world of Benjamin Franklin's less-documented life and associations.
